Miss Agnes Donohue Becomes Bride of J. H. Farmer Tuesday

M iss agnes donother and J. H. Farmer were united in marriage Tuesday morning at the Pro-Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, by Rev. Father Francis Roy. The bride was gowned in a creation of white georgette over white satin, embroidered in crystal beada. The seek was cut in V shape, and finished with a girdle heavily beaded. The neck was large sailor collar of the srepe. The last was of white scorgette crape, trimmed with a crystal bead ornament. Her bouquet was of bride's roses.

Mrs. R. J. Gatlin, sister of the bride, was her attendant. She wore a gown of blaque colored georgette crape over crape de chine. Her hat was of the same color. Her bouquet was of Cecil Bruner roses.

Mr. Gatlin was the best man. A wedding breakfast was served at the home in El Paso on Nevada street, in the house adjoining that of the bride's sister.

The marriage of Miss Marguerite Heard to Lieut, John French Conklin will occur this afternoon at a brilliant military ceremony, to be performed at the force of the bride's sister.

What to Do and When

Tain times," writes Josie, "I have taken books on etiquet in the hope of obtaining enlightenment, but they harp on high class society manners with butiers and maids, which are not my requirement. I'm the ordinary girl who doesn't attend afternoon teas or days at home, such as one hears of and reads of in books, and so I can't get that experience of small talk, so very essential toward sociability. I'm sure there are a number of girls who are in the same position but who will not admit it, and who, being egotistical, will do and say the most awkward things. For instance: The other night I gave a little sweet 15 party for my sister and the part of the hostess fell to me. The entrance to our home is a narrow hallway in the apartment house. Do you wait for your guest at the door? How do you greet the unknown essent of a girl you know? How do you introduce them? How do you sand to not say the girl come where they can arrange their costumes a bit, she escorts them to the young people who have aiready arrived and presents the girl first, mentioning the names of every one there, so that there will be man to the group without stopping to repeat all of the names.

When guests depart, it is again a harrow hallway in the apartment house. Bo you wait for your guest at the door? How do you greet the unknown essent of a girl you know? How do you introduce them? How do you sand to you have all the formal society allows. reads of in books, and so I can't get that experience of small talk so very, essential toward sociability. Do you wait for your guest at the door? How do you greet the unknown escort of a girl you know? How do you introduce them? How do you take leave of them? Finally, my greatest ambition is to have personality. How can that be acquired? I have an idea the one good way to get it is to be going about, meeting people and observing. But I get invitations at rare intervals and cannot always go for lack of escort. I think your reply to my letter will benefit a great many firis."

First of all, a word of encouragement for lack of escort. I think your reply to my letter will benefit a great many firlts."

First of all, a word of encouragement to Josie: You have "personality," as every line of your very individual letter shows.

Nowadays few of us eat with our linives, or drink from our fingerbowls. We keep our eyes open and see first of all that to do so would be awkward, and secondly, that to do so would be very conspicuous in a world where such things "are not done."

Graciousness is the whole keynote of manners. To rise when you are introduced to some one is gracious. Therefore the girl who atands when someone is introducing a man to her need never feel self conscious, in spite of the fact that it is customary to romain seated under those circumstances. Nor need the boy who doffs his hat without waiting for the bow which custom saye comes first from the woman be at all embarrassed. To be cordial and pleasant, without being effusive or bold is to be courteous. And graceful, gracious courtesy, with an unselfisi desire to make other people comfortable, will insure you such good manners that you need never he unhappy about them.

Josie is instinctlely a lady. Her letter shows that clearly, and most of my view or will become soft.
